Eighty Members of the Hapsburg Family. e of Them in Coffin of Pare Silver. Lie Beside Him-The Funeral Attended by the Emperor and the King and Queen of Belgium-Popular Sorrow at Vlenna

VIENNA, Feb. 5 .- This city was to-day enfirely given over to mourning. All places of es were closed, and the shops throughout the city put up their shutters early in the forenoon. Many streets usually bright and aniusted wore a deserted look, the life of the town seing concentrated around the spot where the equies of the Crown Prince were held, thoroughfares leading to the Hotburg bear ample evidence of the public sor-Numberless emblems of mourning. row. Numberless emblems of mourning. black flags and draperies float from the roofs or droop from the windows. Busts of the Crown Prince, surrounded with flowers, gleam among the sable adornments of the balbonies. Enormous crowds commenced to assemble outside the Court chapel at an early hour in the morning. Perfect order prevailed. however, in contrast with the disorder of yesterday. The admission of the public into the chapel ceased at 10 o'clock, when troops barred the streets leading to the Hofburg.

The Emperor and Empress and the Crown Princess attended a requiem mass in the oratory of the palace, at which the "Miserere" was sung by the Court choir. The service was ended at noon. The church bells then commenced to toll.

LOCKING THE COPPIN. The coffin-lid was fasteved at 2 o'clock and the key was confided to Prince Hohenlohe as Grand Marshal of the Imperal Court. Soon afterward the gates of the chapel were closed and the members of the Imperial family gathered around the catafalque to take a last farewell of the re-

THE PROCESSION LEAVES THE PALACE. On the stroke of 4 the coffin was lifted from the bier, blessed and carried to the funeral car. The cortege then started from the Hofburg. Upon reaching the Augustine Church the pricats assembled there placed themselves at the head of the procession, and were followed by the Court and State officials and the municipal authorities on to the Church of the Capucins. SCENE IN THE CHURCH.

The scene in the grand old Church of the Capucins was exceedingly impressive. The interior was entirely draped in black. The benches and seats were covered with sable cloth and the floor was carpeted with black. Three rows of benches stretched from the entrance along the nave on the left, or Gospel side, while the rest of the space on this side, nearer the high altar, was filled by a dais with three rows of priedicur. The first row was Belgians, and the other two rows for the Archdukes and Archduchesses. The catafalque was erected in the middle of the church and was surrounded by massive candelabra. Near the catafalque was a tabouret for the Prince, Arch-bishop of Vienna. Cardinal Ganglbauer, who celebrated a pontifical mass. To the right of the main aisle, on the epistle side and opposite the imperial dais, were priedless for the use of Mgr. Galimberti, the Papal Nuncio, and other

A VAST THRONG OF MOURNERS. When the car carrying the body arrived at the pister gates of the Church of the Capuchin, Emperor Francis Joseph and the King and Queen of the Belgians, followed by the other embers of the Imperial family, entered the body of the church. The Ministers of the Empire, eaded by Count Kalnoky, Count Von Taafo and Herr Von Tisza. and accompanied by the Privy Counsellors of the Empire, took up a position to the right of the catafalque. Next to them, nearer the main entrance, came in order the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the Reichsrath, the Hungarian Diet and the provincial authorities of Lower Austria, the Burgomasters of Vienna and Posth, the Delegates of both capitals, and other deputations. In three rows of seats to the left of the entrance the chief court officials took their places, including the Captains of the Guard, the Emperor's Adjutant-General, the Grand Mistress of the Empress' household, the principal court ladies, Crown Princess Stephanie's Court Marshal and Rudolph's Ad-

Domine," sung by the Court broke the impressive hush. When the choral was over, and just as the serlains were preparing to carry the coffin to the vault, the Emperor, stepping up to the bier, knelt in prayer. On arising He was joined by his brother, Archduke Charles Louis: his nephew, the Archduke Francis of Este; his son-in-law, Prince Leopold of Bavaria, and Duke Philip of Coburg, and all followed the coffin to the vault, where, after the final blessing. Prince Hohenlohe delivered the remains to the charge of the Father Guardian.

ALL OVER BY PIVE O'CLOCK. Although an enormous number of people assembled in the streets to witness the cortege, complete order was preserved throughout the obsequies, which terminated about 5 o'clock. IN THE CAPUCINE VAULTS.

The vault in which the body of Crown Prince Rudolph has been interred is under the old Church of the Order of the Capucine. The coffins of eighty members of the House of Hapsburg lie there, some of them, notably those of the famous Empress Maria There a. and of her husband, Francis, being of pure silver. Among others are those of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian, of Mexico, and also of Napoleon II., Duke of Reichstadt, the son of Napoleon L., and of his Austrian wife, Empress Marie Louise.

> Labouchere's Version of Crown Prince Rudolph's Death.

Copyright, 1880, by The Press Publishing Company (New York World) [SPECIAL CABLE DESPATCH TO THE WORLD.] LONDON, Feb. 5.-The death of Rudolph is without doubt an immense advantage to Prince Bismarck. But one should not for that reason onclude that the unfortunate Prince was "removed." It is nearly certain, however, that he did not commit suicide; and it is almost as certain that he was "suicided." We all know that he did not make a love match; and it is no secret that of the two princesses who were pointed out to him as desirable matches, he took the one which the Hebrew beauty told him to take because she was the least likely over to subjugate him. Crown Princess Stephanie has, so to speak, no eyes. Her husband called them eyes incapable of expressing any feelings but those of wariness and suspicion. I do not in the least blame the Crown Prince for having sought his feminine ideal outside of matrimony. Can there be anything more horrible than a matrimonial status which is forced upon one. He was young, clever, original, freakish and without any steadying influence. His wife was wholly uninteresting and anything but pretty. Indeed, if she had been a chambermaid in a was splendidly provided for the Crown Prince

Little Archduchess Elizabeth's Rights to the Throne.

VIEW, A. Feb. 5. .- Advices from Posth say that the question already engages the anxious attention of the Ministers, although no official notification respecting the succession will be made until the end of the year. The Government organ, the Pester Liona, vaguely suggested yesterday the right of Princess Elizabeth to succeed to the throne. The Vienna press in the mean time treats the right of Archduke Karl as incontestable. Austrian politicians share in the existing derangement of the public mind. When the excitement abates and a clearer vision comes of the results of Endolph's death, it will be seen that it incolves a probability of a formidable conflict over Bearin, Feb. 5.-The question of the succescion to the Austrian throne is crusing increasing xcitement in official and diplomatic circles The papers quote an article from the Italia, the official journal of Signor Crispl, the Italian Prune Minister, declaring that the Salie law has been virtually abolished in Austria-Hungary since the pragmatic sanction, therefore Crown Prince Rudolph's daughter is the beir to the throne. It s certain that Premier Crispi does not relish the prospect of the heir of the Duke of Modens, who was dispossessed by the unification of Italy, beoming the presumptive heir to the thronof Austria. Furthermore, both Archduke Karl and his son Franz are ultra-Catholic focs of the House of Savoy, and enemies of Italian unity and are ardent allies of the Vatican. Apart from these enmitties, even if class interests did not raise the question of succession, it would be doubtful if official opinion here would maintain the right of Emperor Francis Joseph in following precedent to declare, through an act of succession, the Princess Elizabeth the heir to the throne. LACOUCHERE'S HINT TO THE SENATE.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Vice-President-elect Levi P. Morton arrived in this city this after noon to attend the dinner given by Mr. A. J. Drexel to-night. A crowd had collected around the genot, and when the 4,40 train arrived a rush was made for the gate and a line formed, through which Mr. Morton, if he had arrived, would have had to pass. Mr. Morton came alone by a later train, the crowd had dispersed and the guest was greeted by a reporter, who stemped up and said: How are you. Mr. Morton strong results around Mr. Morton shook

Morton:

Turning partly around Mr. Morton shook hands and said: "I am pretty well. Are you Mr. Drexel's son?" Further down the platform Mr. Drexel's son igned the party and escorted Mr. Morton to the carriage.

Mr. Drexel's dinner, it was stated, had no political significance. Mr. Drexel, as an old friend of Mr. Morton, invited several well-known Philadelphia professional and business men to meet the Vice-President-elect before the latter entered on his duties. The guests were leading railroad men, journalists, lawyers, financiers and other business men.
